1. After the breakdown of the intrazonal trade discussions the DEAG has assumed a special importance in the foreign trade program of the German Democratic Republic. (1) DEAG cooperates closely with the "RASNO-Export" Agency. (2) It enjoys privileges similar to those of the latter agency and virtually has an extraterritorial status.
2. DEAG which handles all business transactions which cannot be conducted through normal channels has its headquarters at the intersection of Friedrichstrasse and Kronenstrasse, Berlin; its director is one Rohdin, (fnu).
3. "DERUTRA" functions as a forwarding agency for DEAG. (3) Through its cooperation with the "RASNO-Export" agency DEAG has excellent connections with all Soviet trading agencies. These connections are utilized by DEAG in the preparation of falsified bills.
4. The following is an illustration of the methods used by DEAG in conducting its business: A department of DAHA (Deutscher Aussenhandel) (German Foreign Trade) needs a special kind of wood in a quantity valued at 40,000 DM west for the manufacture of musical instruments intended for export. This wood is available in Bremen. The Soviet Zone Ministry for Interzonal and Foreign Trade does not approve the transfer of the sum in question because its reserves of Western German currency are exhausted. The head of the department thereupon contacts Director Rohdin of the DEAG, who procures the wood from Bremen in exchange for toys to be delivered to Munich. The toys are supplied by the DAHA department which needs the wood. The firm in Bremen receives an order from a fictitious Western German firm to be paid in DM West. In the same way the firm in Munich receives a bill for the delivered toys from a non-existent West German firm. For such transactions DEAG keeps the required stock of forms and bills. In case the firms in Western Germany are reluctant to accept fake bills prepared in Western Germany, bills from foreign firms, for the most part from Holland, are furnished. DEAG receives a commission of 3 1/2 percent of both the imported and exported goods.
6. Mahler, (fnu), employed in the "Frankfurter" Department of the Ministry of Interzonal and Foreign Trade is kept informed of all business transactions between one of the 11 departments of DAHA and DEAG. (4) Only certain departments of the DAHA are authorized to transact business via DEAG.
